Whether completing an apprenticeship, one of our two post-16 football and education programmes, or signing up for one of our short courses aimed at preparing learners for specific industries and careers, more and more people are choosing to study with AITC. We pride ourselves on being able to providing not only an inspirational learning environment – with many programmes delivered at the American Express Community Stadium – but also maintaining a consistently high level of academic delivery, led by our fully-qualified and highly-experienced team of teachers, tutors and coaches. Additionally, our qualified teaching staff are complemented by colleagues with significant experience in youth work which enables us at AITC to provide another dimension to the support that we are able to offer those individuals who choose to study with us. Furthermore, our two football and education programmes, which combine academic study with either 11-a-side football or futsal, also benefit from a roster of fully-qualified coaches including former Brighton & Hove Albion players. As a charity we are fortunate to work with some fantastic partner organisations and education providers – including many who provide funding for learners, removing the financial burden which often comes as an unwanted by-product of continuing in full or part-time education. Hopefully, whatever stage you are at in your educational journey, there will be a course at AITC which is suitable for you enabling you to take one more step up the education ladder. Further information can be found at the following link: https://www.albioninthecommunity.org.uk/qualifications/
